Dear Mr. Dodgson

I saw Mr. Bywater a few days ago and showed him the Dutch Academy paper and he thought that a volume of something like 6 or 7 times the length of that contribution might make a successful case: of course one can never be certain as it would be subjected to expert examination. I have not written to Mr. D. since: do you wish me to do so? If you do, I will do so to ask him for a reply to my last letter; but I fear his long silence means 'no' or else that he considers the project too expensive.

Believe me

Yours truly J. R. H. S.
